Foreword

At four o'clock dense silence enfolds the sleeping city. The last revellers have long since vanished into the gaping caverns in the man-made mountains. A few flickering street lamps serve only to intensify the darkness; their rays reveal grotesque shapes. In the distance indistinct specks appear and vanish without a sound—they are just the street cleaners removing the discarded remains of yesterday to make room for the discarded remains of tomorrow. So it has always been and so it will ever be.

Meanwhile, the pale light of a false dawn reveals a frenzied spurt of activity on the building above. Frantic little figures scurry about the roof. The Senior Class of June 1938 is making final preparation for its flight to Mars. As the crew prepares for the examination by the faculty to determine their fitness, the officers plot the course. With care, the sponsor aims the space-ship projector. It is dark again.

Awaiting the zero hour, the group recalls its trial flight—sometimes successful, sometimes disastrous. They remember those who "cracked-up." Silently, the seniors wonder whether they, too, will meet the same fate. Have they learned enough to venture forth? Have they made their school better for those who are to follow? Did they pass that last quiz?

In the midst of these doubts, a dim light appears on the horizon to mount steadily. The principal reveals the names of those who are to go. While their unsuccessful comrades wish them luck, those graduating man their stations.

A white puff, then an explosive roar. . . . Quiet.

They're off to explore the uncharted regions of Mars. Farewell to the easy life of high school; undreamed of difficulties lie just ahead; but the Class of June 1938 goes confidently on.

To The Seniors

The June class of 1938 carries with it the same good wishes and hopes I entertain for every class that graduates from this school.

Many things will happen to all of you and I hope that most of these things will be encouraging and helpful. Your astrological theme should bring the planet Mars before you at present, and you may find this planet very active in its influence. Mars, the god of war, has appeared in many lands during the past year and threatens to cast its baneful influence over all the world. If this happens, many of you will be called upon to assume great responsibilities and to make great sacrifices. I hope we have in some small measure prepared you for these things.

Before You Go

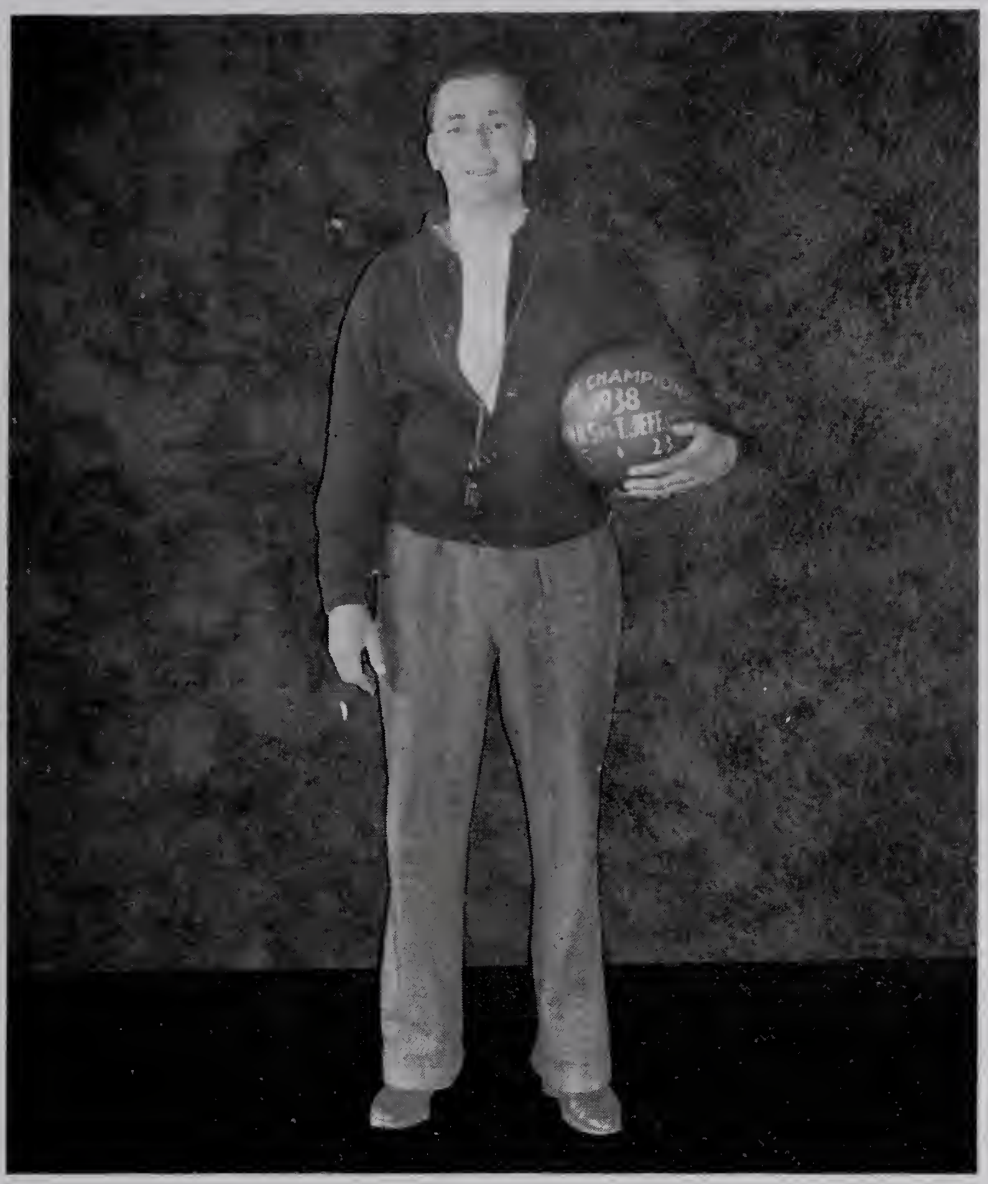

"The way of fortune is like the milky way in the sky; which is a meeting, or knot of small stars, not seen separately, but giving light together; so are there a number of little virtues, or rather faculties and customs that make men fortunate"—Bacon.

Your future, your fortune—how eagerly you look ahead into the years before you. Never lose sight of the fact that success grows less and less dependent on luck and chance. The age of fierce competition is upon us, and this competition will become more and more intense.

Determine on some course, some field of effort. Do not hesitate too long.

Knowledge, hope, patience, courage, industry—these are the "small stars" which are necessary as guides to success in this day of specialization.

Lois L. Stone.

To The Man Who Makes The Stars

When our boys return victorious from a basketball game or a track meet, in our mild excitement over the triumph and in our hearty praise of the athletes, we tend to forget the one who taught those boys all they know about the game. Unmindful of this, however, he goes on as before, with seemingly inexhaustible patience and unfailing courage to turn what seems to be a group of clumsy school boys into another winning team.

To Mr. Julius Conn, who has guided our basketball and track teams to the heights of victory during this and past years, we, therefore, dedicate our Beacon Annual.

MELBA, MARS, JUNE 11, 102,461,937

Zaronarch Gets Foo

For his outstanding contribution to the enlightenment of mankind in discovering the key to the famous "Kleptomaniac Papers",(page39, column 3) Dr. Antonius D. Zaronarch will be awarded the Golden Foo Metal, the first ever to be presented, the trustees of the Goo Memorial Foundation unanimously voted today. His companions Dr. Andous Anous and Pilot Fred Smith will be presented with Silver Foos. Four Silver Foos approximately equal one Golden Foo it was revealed.

The formal cermonies will take place upon the hero's return, some time in 102,461,938, the trustees promised. More than 45,000,000 persons are expected at Infinity's Geep Field to greet the venerable doctor.

At the same time, it is planned to celebrate the discovery of Mars in honor of the original settlers whose names are found on "The Kleptomaniac papers." Those hundred and eighty, realizing that the Earth could not be inhabited much longer set out to find a new home, soon after leaving Newport News High. In the course of their journey, they landed on Venus, but finally picked Mars because of the large amount of Vitamin Q found its air.

Then they return to EARTH so that they could bring the remaining

Kleptomaniac Key Found

SPECIAL TO THE BEACON VIA TRANSILVISION

THE EARTH, June 10—Accidentally, Dr. Antonius D. Zaronarch, Mar's greatest living archeologist, discovered today the key to the "Kleptomaniac Papers." At the time, he was preparing to leave here for Melba, discouraged by the failure of his EARTH expedition, to find any people here.

The key, will clear up the mystery surrounding the meaning of these Historic papers (page 40, column 2)

To reach THE EARTH, a custom built space ship was used with the expenses of the expedition being raised by THE BEACON through its advertisers (pages 45 to 60). Maintaining communication with the explorers required a twenty-four watch in THE BEACON'S transil-vision station.

Though the "Kleptomaniac Papers" have been in the Martain National Archives for more than seventy-five million years, it was impossible to decipher them. They were discovered in 75,461,938. Full text of the documents and their key is printed for the first time in the BEACON (page 40, column 2).

traces of the extinct Western civilization.

Faced by the prospect of slow death if his party remained, the "grand old man of science" reluctantly gave orders to break camp. Before this could be accomplished, however, the super-space ship had to be dug out from a dust bank that completly covered the right side and part of the roof. This had been formed when the ship settled down two weeks ago.

While removing the dust, Dr. Zaronarch's shovel hit a metallic object. The resounding thud brought the other two members of the party to the scene.

A few hurried strokes brought a rusty steel case to the surface. A blast from Pilot Fred Tuttle's gammatron gun sufficed to open it. Peering inside the Martians saw only a mouldy slip of paper that crumbled when touched or breathed upon.

"Light sensitive plates," called the Director. He inserted the musty document between two sheets. In an hour, the relic was ready for translation, but at first, it did not make sense. It was indeed "a strange and wondrous document."

The explorers spent more than an hour trying to find a solution, then Dr. Zaronarch thought of the "Kleptomaniac Papers." He put in a hurried call to the Martian National Archives and learned that the newly discovered paper was the key to the scientific puzzle.

The scientist indicated that it had been impossible for him to locate any traces of the decendents of the Martians. All persons venturing out of the space ship wore nickle plated electralloy suits, with special heat radiation fins of tantalum-mondubellium, to protect them he stated. The helmets were machined from solid carbon locks, and fitted with plexiglass-pyrex windows.
